

Book Signing and Reception for Phyllis B. Olson

Olson, a Pinehurst resident and member of St. Mary Magdalene Episcopal Church in Seven Lakes, recently released her second novel. The public is invited to Seven Lakes for a reading and conversation about writing, growing up in small towns, and how to be hopeful. Refreshments and fellowship to follow. Books available for purchase. No reservations needed.

Public is invited:
Saturday March 14
1:00 – 2:30 PM
St. Mary Magdalene Episcopal Church
1145 Seven Lakes Drive, Seven Lakes, NC

About the book: ‘On Adelphi Road is the sequel to Olson’s 2024 release of The Faded Blue House, a tender story of the Evans family set in small town Arkansas during World War II. Phoebe, the book’s central character, continues to be a strength to her family as the war affects their town. “Deployment of loved ones and unsettling letters from the frontline forge solidarity among citizens facing personal losses, uncertainty, and the burden of rationing. Triumph comes when President Truman declares an end to war.” (from book cover.)

About the author: Olson was born and raised in small town Arkansas. She is a retired special education teacher.
